THE SUCCESS

WASHING MACHINE

Patented Jan. 7th, 1862.

I N introducing this Celebrated Washing Machine to the public, our own experience warms us not, to expect entire confidences in air assertions, owing to thefrequent impositions of worthles machines upon the public. All of the machine. This machine is meeting with favor unparalleled in the listory of Washing Machines and is destined to come into georal nea. It is very simple and assily managed; achild twelve years old can operate it. It keeps the clothes constantly turning, thus rubbing every partalled it does the work all at one operation; there is no rubbing out dirty spots, on the washboard and it will washing out dirty spots, on the washboard and it will washanything-from a lace collar to a rug-compet. It does not trib off buttons or hooks and eyes; it requires from two to three policy of water; its capacity is from four to six whirts; the saving of enop one-half, and of time about nine-tenths above land washing.

We could produce a large number of testimonials of those who have tried this machine, but do not think it unconstant as the machine will speak for itself. So far we have not been able to supply the demand but will ondearer to do so in the future.

OUR SECRET DRAWER.

There is a secret drawer in ever heart, Wherein we lay our treasures one by one; Each a remembrace of the buried past; Each an enshrined relic of the time that's gone The old delights of chikliood long ago; The things we loved because we knew The first discovered primitive in our path The makoo's note; the robio's pest;

The merry hay making around our home:

Our rambles in the summer woods and laces;
The story took beside the winter first.

While the wind mouned across the window panes;

The golden drama we drama in after years;
Those magic visions of our young romance;
The sunny nocks, the fountains and the flowers,
Gilding the fairy landscape of our trance; The link which bound us later still to one Who fills a curner in our life to-day. Without whose love we dare not dream how dark The rest would seem, if it were gone away;

The song that thrilled our souls with every joy; The gentle word that managered come;
The gift we prized, because the thought was kind;
The thousand, thousand things that have no main

All these in some far hidden corner lie, Within the mystery of that secret drawer, 17 Whose magic apring, though stranger hands may touch, Yet none may gaze upon its guarded store.

From Chambers' Journal. The Eton Boy.

So long as hoys are permitted to go about met with a specimen only last week, which I shall not easily forget. I was starting from Waterloo Station by an afternoon train for Hampshire, and, meeting with four military friends, who were going to Farnboro Station (for Aldershot,) I got into one of their carriages. Besides us five there was nn Eton Boy.. There is no mistaking that description of the race; they are always dressed in the height of fashion in the vacations, alhalf its brim off, and moreover, they all wear stiff little white ties, which gave them the aphaughty and reserved as North American Inage, or so, whom we had on this occasion for and our fellow-traveler, looked as though the entire railway station, plant, and valuable house property adjacent, belonged entirely to himself. My soldier monds, however, (a class which has generally a contempt for boys,) paid no sort of attention to him, and, as for me, I was delighted to ignore his presence, " Now, Jack," said my friends, two of whom were my college chums, and all of them inti- participated in the existing of any rebellion in mates, "you will let us smoke, we know, alhough not fond of it yourself?"

" Well," replied I, "it will very probably make me ill, but otherwise I have no objec-· As soon as the train began to move, they se-

The officers started as though the carriagelamp had uttered an observation, and then all four burst out in a roar of laughter.

"You will find it no laughing matter, tleraen, when you get to Farmboro," said the litonian; " or at all events the joke will cost you two pounds a-piece. You have been warned, as the act directs: I object to your smoking in this carriage."

"Then get into another, you little brute," observed Pepperpot of the One Hundred and shall have intervened, and upon the condition Tenth, indeed I have a great mind to drop that they, such persons, shall take an oath and you out of the window as we go along. "I am obliged to you for your good opinion," returned the little wonder, drawing out a gold repeater; "but if within one minute your cigars are not extinguished, I will appear against you as sure as I am a living man. And that awful specimen of the genus Boy smoked undeterred, like a lime-kiln, until we both got out at Weymouth; where if I had had loose, one is liable to meet with them, and I my way he should have been taken to Portland prison, and kept there until such time as he should be no longer a boy.

WM. H. SEWARD, Sec'y of State. JESUS DESCRIBED BY A ROMAN.—The follow ing description of the person and manners of Jeeus Christ is said to have been found in an ancient manuscript sent by Publius Lontulus, President of Judea, to the Roman Senate. It may have been, but the goodly Publius must have written with wonderful resemblance to the

"There lives at this time in Judea a man of singular character, whose name is Jesus Christ. The barbarians esteem him as their prophet; but his followers adore him as the immediate offspring of the immortal God. He is endowed with such unparalleled virtues as to call back the dead from their graves, and to heal every kind of disease with a word or a touch. His person is tall and elegantly shaped; his aspect amiable and reverend; his hair grows in those beauteous shades which no united colors can match, falling in graceful curls below his ears, agreeably conching on his shoulders, and parting on the crown of his head; his dress is that of the sect of Nazarites ; his forchead is smooth and large; his cheeks without spot, save that of lovely red; his nose and mouth are formed with exquisite symmetry; his beard is thick and suitable to the hair of his bend, reaching a little below his chin, and parting in the middle like a fork; his eyes are bright, clear and serene. He rebukes with mildness, and invites in the most tender persuasive language-his whole address whether in word or deed, being elegant, grave, and strictly characteristic of so exalted a being. No man has been him laugh, but the world beholds him weep frequently, and so persuasive are his tears that the multitude cannot refrain their teurs from falling in sympathy with him. He is modest, temperate and wise; in short, whatever the phenomenor may turn out in the end, he seems at present to be a man of excellent beauty and divine per fections, every way surpassing men."

Sound Minus SENSE .- A young gentlemanpreacher-with fine action, voice, and so forth, mounted the pulpit and began his sermon; and lo ! he had forgotten it, and knew even less than before what he had to say. However, he composed himself, raised his voice (and himself too, as he hoped, by the action,) and proclaimed to his audience, with rare energy, one conjunction after another,-finally, The persons excepted from the benefits of the because, then, whether, but,--and muttered with falling voice all kind of inaudible matter between the participles. The poorer parishinners were excited, and in the highest degree attentive, yet without being able to understand much; and so they naturally and reasonably attributed their sitting from the pulpit, which one part of the congregation supposed too far off, and the other too near. And so this soulcurer, with his connecting, passionate, and apostrophizing words; preached about threequarters of an hour, throwing himself and the ow-occupiers into a fever and perspiration; then pronounced the Amen, and descended from the pulpit with the reputation of a true caphuism is required by delicacy, says "Mepulpit orator. The whole body of heaters resolved next time to choose their seals better; some to sit nearer, some to sit further off, so as not to loose a syllable. Now what else do most teachers preach to children, and philosophizers to the sons of the muses and their readrs, than a few thousand whethers, thens, buts, without rational words attached? What elso are most lessons to children-than customary marks to pay no attention ?- Jean Paul's Le-Jounny Reb, looking at one of our guns, remarked that he "didn't think that the Yanks would use them big guns much longer." " Why not " inquired one of the Feds. " Because," row that you'll fire clear over it and bit your men on the other side."

MARY Clover considers Timothy Hay, the young farmer over the hill, the best soming machine is the world. Tim, on the other band, contends that Mary is the neatest and best of sewing machines; but it is only a so-so differ ence, they don't fight over it.

Dyspersia is said to be the remorse of a guilty stomach.

THE VALUE OF A SURAP-BOOK .- Every on who takes a nowspaper which he in the least ted by such State government in relation to degree appreciates, will often regret to see a the freed people of such State, which shall rec- number thrown aside for waste paper which contains some interesting and important articles. A good way to preserve these is the use of a scrap-book. One who has never been accustomed thus to preserve short articles can suggested as not improper that in constructing Here a choice piece of poetry meets the eye,

There is a witty anecdote-it does you good to laugh over it, yet, though for the twentieth time. Next is a valuable recipe you had almost forgotten, and which you had found just in time to save you much perplexity. There is a sweet little story, the memory of which has cheered and encouraged you many a time, when almost ready to despair under the pressure of take up a single paper without re-parusing. Just glance over the sheet before you, and see be of service to you a hundred times in life. A choice thought is far more precious than a bit of glittering gold. Hoard with care the precious gems, and see at the close of the year

what a rich treasure you have accumulated. An Exonus or Froces.—A sight was witnessed on the plains near Hay which no human eye has probably ever witnessed before, or is likely ever to see again. As a shepherd was anoozing, as is his custom, within the scanty shadow of a stunted gum tree his slumbers were disturbed by what he described as " like a rushing wind whistling through a bed of reeds." But on looking around him, what was his surprise to behold the plain, for at least a square mile, covered with an innumerable army of frogs. On , on, they came, in their hundreds and thousands till it seemed as if the line would stretch out till the crack of doom. Had the Bishop of Natal been present, he might have supposed, and with some reason, too, that Providence was convincing him, by occular demonstration, that the ninth plague of Egypt was historically true. It was certainly a strange sight, this exodus of frogs, and is thus accounted for : The long and excessive drought to which this part of the colony has been subjected had completely dried up the clayed awaren which they inhabited, and the poor creatures, to save themselves from perishing, were obliged to emigrate; for when the shepherd saw them they were en route for the Murrumbidgee; and it is worthy of remark that many of the old frogs carried picaniany, frogs upon their backs.
